USM Pep Rallies extended beyond the campus and into the community.This gave students and Alumni a chance to pull together and express the true meaning of EAGLE FEVER.

"A Coming of Age" is a tribute to the University of Southern Mississippi and the people and region it serves. Reaching out to the students is only one aspect of the University's life. Students and faculty are involved in aspects of political, religious, and social life of the region.

The University not only educates, but entertains as the Big Gold fly into M. M. Roberts Stadium and as Southern Exposure sings the blues. Fans at the ball games support the Eagles (win or lose) and new professionals are given to the region with every graduating class. "A Coming of Age" emphasizes the advances that The University of SouthernMississippi has made over the years. Imagine yourself transformed back intime to 1912. You have probably just come from your hometown, and you are around 16 years old. There is no electricity no comforts of home. Your new home has become "Mississippi Normal College."

The Eagle mascot could be seen at many football games entertaining the crowd with his antics. He also served as a picture partner during the 75th Homecoming Celebration.

You can now move through the decades—the World War II era, the baby-boom, the Korean War, the days of Kennedy, Vietnam, and the Nuclear age. USM has grown to be over 640 acres, 120 buildings, three branch centers, and over 12,000 students and faculty. Expansion, tradition, vision make USM a place to come of age! "A Coming of Age" realizes that we are seventh-five years old. USM has come from the "Normal College"to State Teachers College, to Mississippi Southern, to the present. We have come so far, but as the old Cliché goes, have so far to go. We have not reached our full potential—no institution ever does. There will always be changes for the better and for the worse. These changes, however can only strengthen the bond of service and commitment that The University of Southern Mississippi holds so true. "A Coming of Age" knows the problems and fears of yesterday—the threats of war, economic fluctuations, and passing a final examination. The flowers still bloom, parking tickets are still given out, teachers still challenge their students to think, and the crowd still yells for the Black and Gold.

USM's Student Alumni Association was very active on campus this year. One of their many activities was a Faculty Tea to help the students and faculty get to know one another.

Nugget was brought to many games. He could also be seen in his cage in front of the coliseum.

The University of Southern Mississippi experienced a change at the end of the fall semester. Coach Jim Carmody resigned and USM began its search for a new head football coach.

Right: Closeness was something that was gained between many students. Friends could be seen piled into cars cruising the campus or getting a late night snack at Krystals. Above: The Dixie Darlings were a familiar sight at all of the football games. The crowds were especially pleased when the strut was put back into their half time performance.

The University of Southern Mississippi is coming of age. The past, present and future fuse together to form an actualization of the phenomenon of the "Traditions and Visions" of the Diamond Jubilee. From 1912 to 1987 USM has had something to prove. And the proof had become evident—USM-has come of age.

One familiar face at the football games was this gentleman. A definite Eagle Fan who provoked Spirit throughout the stands.

Sorority Rush

Not what you would expect

Rush was not anything like anyone expected. It was far more than just a bunch of sorority women meeting a bunch of rushees. It was a week of hard work, trials, and tribulations.

Rush for the sororities began in the Spring semester. There were workshops held in which a number of girls spent countless hours perfecting skits and songs. Lots of time was also spent working on props and costumes. The skits and songs performed each day of rush helped explain to the rushees a little of what Greek life is like at USM.

During the week of rush, about three hundred girls went to parties,watched skits, and talked to sorority members. After all of these activities took place, the final decision rested in both the hands of the rushees and the sororities.

Bid Day was exciting for both groups. Once bids were handed out, the rushees ran from Scott Hall to Panhellinic to find their new sisters.

Left: On Bid Day,the floors of Panhellinic were as excited as the rushees. Each sorority decorated their balcony to welcome their new sisters.

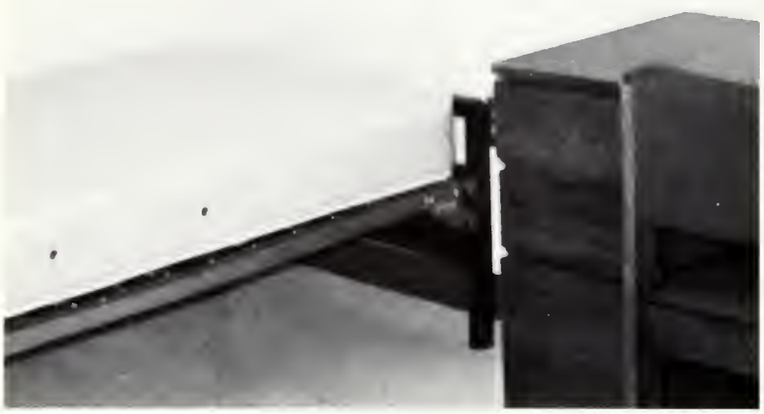
Bid Day was exciting for both the sororities and the rushees. After receiving their bids, the girls ran from Scott Hall to Panhellinic, to join their new families.

Alpha Delta Pi members entertained the rushees by dancing.This was the only sorority on USM's campus that had a meeting house.

Below: Delta Zeta members participated in a skit based upon the movie "Grease." The chapter rooms were always decorated to fit the daily themes. Right: Tanza Nations, Bridget Horne, and Gidget Horne, participated in a skit for Delta Delta Delta.

Pi Beta Phi members participated in their skit with an "Annie" theme. Those participating were Andrea Conerly, Sabrina Johnson, Katherine Calvert, Jackie Stupica, Teri Sue Bankston, Elizabeth Bush, and Jane Grisom.

Left: With the renovation of Mississippi Hall, it reopened its doors to many new comers. Little did this empty room know what awaited it when its boarders arrived. Below: Many students chose to move into the dorms the first day they opened. Teri Sue Bankston checked into her room after a long drive from home.



Settling In

Brings horrors, hassles, and headaches

That long awaited day has finally arrived. You are a college student! As you take the first load of pieces from home to that room which you have convinced yourself is a small plush apartment, you insert the key into the lock that will protect your life's treasures for the next nine months.

The door swings open and you fall to the ground from overwhelming goulash green walls and the locker room smell. When you come back to life you find someone who looks as though he stepped off the set of the "Revenge of The Nerds" movie hovering over you.

You let out a scream of terror and when you both recover from the shock, he introduces himself as your roommate. No, no, this just can't be! It's just a dream. The problem is, the worst is yet to come. Your suitemates enter, obviously dressed for a consume party as Hell's Angels.

Late that afternoon, you carry up your last load of towels and they feel as though they are a box of bricks. After collapsing on the bed, you realize there is something moving under you!! The dreaded vinyl covered mattress.

What could happen next? You have to rent your books

You decided you will be smart for a change and get to the bookstore early. After you go through security clearance, you find out that everyone else decided to join you in the book renting process.

You collect approximately three hundred pounds of text and then begin the time of your life. You never realized that standing in line could be so much fun.

Three hours later you place the books on the counter and attempt to get your check book out of your back pocket with your arms and hands that are permanently bent into a cradle position.

With shaking hand you write out a check and hand it to the checker along with your brand new ID. The woman at the counter goes into hysterics claiming it was the funniest thing ever and holding it up so that the 600 students behind you can enjoy it too.

Three weeks later, after suffering from total humiliation, nerve damage, and physical exhaustion, you realize that college life might not kill you after all.

You are so glad that you found out your suitemates were really going to a costume ball. And as for your roomie, well, you think you might be able to hold out until the next semester.

It will just take some getting used to.

Left: Stephanie Mobley and Teri Sue Bankston, roommates, helped one another carry the endless boxes of treasures from home to their new room.

Once upstairs, Teri Sue and Stephanie took a second to catch their breath before beginning the all night task of interior dorm decorating.

Style '88

Students Dress For Success

Clothing is an all-persuasive and powerful expression of human imagination and spirit. At Southern you need not look far to find the fashion conscious student.

What is most impressive about the fashion scene at Southern is the large array of attire which can be seen on a daily basis.

One should never feel inhibited by their attire when entering a college classroom. In class you can expect to find anything from old worn out gym shorts and sneakers that can walk by themselves, to Pierre Cardin slacks and a stifly starched Calvin Klien shirt.

Is the statement "Clothes can make (or break) a man" true? Clothes can make men or women the talk of the town, yet at the same time send their well-dressed souls to the poor house.

With the fitness fad of the eighties came better built bodies to carry better priced clothes.

Better priced clothing often means higher-priced clothing. Do you remember your grandparents talking about the sixteen cent pair of Robuckers they ordered in the "good ole days?" Well today Robuckers run rampant, but are better known as Geaubux and Guess.

Although these denim delights are readily available, they have never been sixteen cents and never shall be. The average "cheap"fashions of the eighties can run from $65 to $105 and still lack something.

Stone broke students need not despair! There is a secret to looking great that no fashion magazine will ever tell about. The expression "If you look great you'll feel great," also works the other way around. "If you feel great, you'll look great." Self confidence says more than a $75 shirt.

Little did Scott McNally know of the reason for the placing of his rocking chair. To his surprise Jackie Stupica tipped him over while modeling a mini outfit from the LaPlace department of Wal-Doffs.

Left: Southern Style members Todd Buchanan, Chuck Donlin, and Elliott Voivedich spent the early morning checking in the High School students. This was only the beginning of the days activities. Below: The ten schools and colleges set up displays in the Union lobby. The students were given time to explore and ask questions about their upcoming decision about a major.

Spirit Spectacular

Students take a look at USM

USM held it's annual Spirit Spectacular during homecoming weekend. High school juniors and seniors from throughout Mississippi and surrounding states came to tour the University and attend the football game.

The members of Southern Style took small groups around campus and pointed out the major parts of USM's grounds. Each School inside the university set up a display in the Union lobby. The students were given time to browse throughout these displays and see what USM had to offer. The Army and Air Force also set up displays for those interested in joining the armed forces.

Students were given free time to explore the campus. Many chose to look up old friends from home, while others chose to visit the resident halls so that they could decide where they wanted to live for their college years. Still, others chose to join the college crowd and hung out in front of the Hub.

The students were informed about high school weekend in the Spring and also about Mini-Quarter in the summer. Those with decided majors visited the school associated with their choice.

This weekend gave USM the chance to shine. The spirits of the campus were up due to homecoming and there were a number of alums around to help spread that "Eagle Fever."

ight: Brian White took his group on a tour the campus. This helped the students be- me more familiar with USM.

Left: Along with the schools and colleges, the Armed Forces were also there to answer questions for those who were interested in entering the service. Above: The College of Education and Psychology set up a display about education through the years: Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow.

Songfest

Brings Christmas Spirit to Southern

The ladies of Chi Omega put on yet another successful Songfest. Many independent groups participated including "The Fellowship," who were the first group of independents to ever perform at Songfest in the previous year.

The groups ranged in size and were categorized as either small or large groups. Awards were given for Best Performance in both categories, Most Cooperative, and Most Original. The ladies of Pi Beta Phi and the men of Alpha Tau Omega carried away the Best Performance Awards.

Songfest was Chi Omega and USM's contribution to the Hattiesburg Christmas Season. Along with the Christmas wishes went a large check to the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Right: One of the very touching moments was when Dwayne White played the piano and sang DO YOU HEAR WHAT I HEAR. Dwayne was a member of the independent group, The Fellowship. Below: The ladies of Pi Beta Phi Sorority, under the direction of Laura Ingram, performed MASTERS IN THIS HALL. They received Best Performance for a small group.

Left: Delta Delta Delta Sorority chose to do more than just sing. They performed their song in sign language as well, which won them the Originality Award. Below: The men of Alpha Tau Omega won Best Performance for a large group.

Songfest Director Missy Arata presented the representatives of Muscular Dystrophy with a check.

The Fellowship, which was the first independent group to participate in Songfest, under the direction of Scott Slay, presented their version of FEED THE WORLD.

The Lead Guitarist rips out a guitar solo as the Producers played to a crowd that was packed into the Union Plaza after the first USM football pep rally.

The Producers

The Producers rocked the R.C. Cook Union Plaza with well over 1,200 people packing the area.

The crowd's excitement was obvious as the group began their 90-minute performance with their hit song, "What's He Got." The event was co-sponsored by the University Activities Council, WHSY radio station, the Associated Student Body, and Pepsi.

The Atlanta based group's four members said they thought the USM crowd was "really enthusiastic" and "a lot of fun."

After their set, the Producers decided to take advantage of a UAC sponsored activity and stole away to Bennett Auditorium to catch the rest of the UAC Thursday night movie, "Little Shop of Horrors."

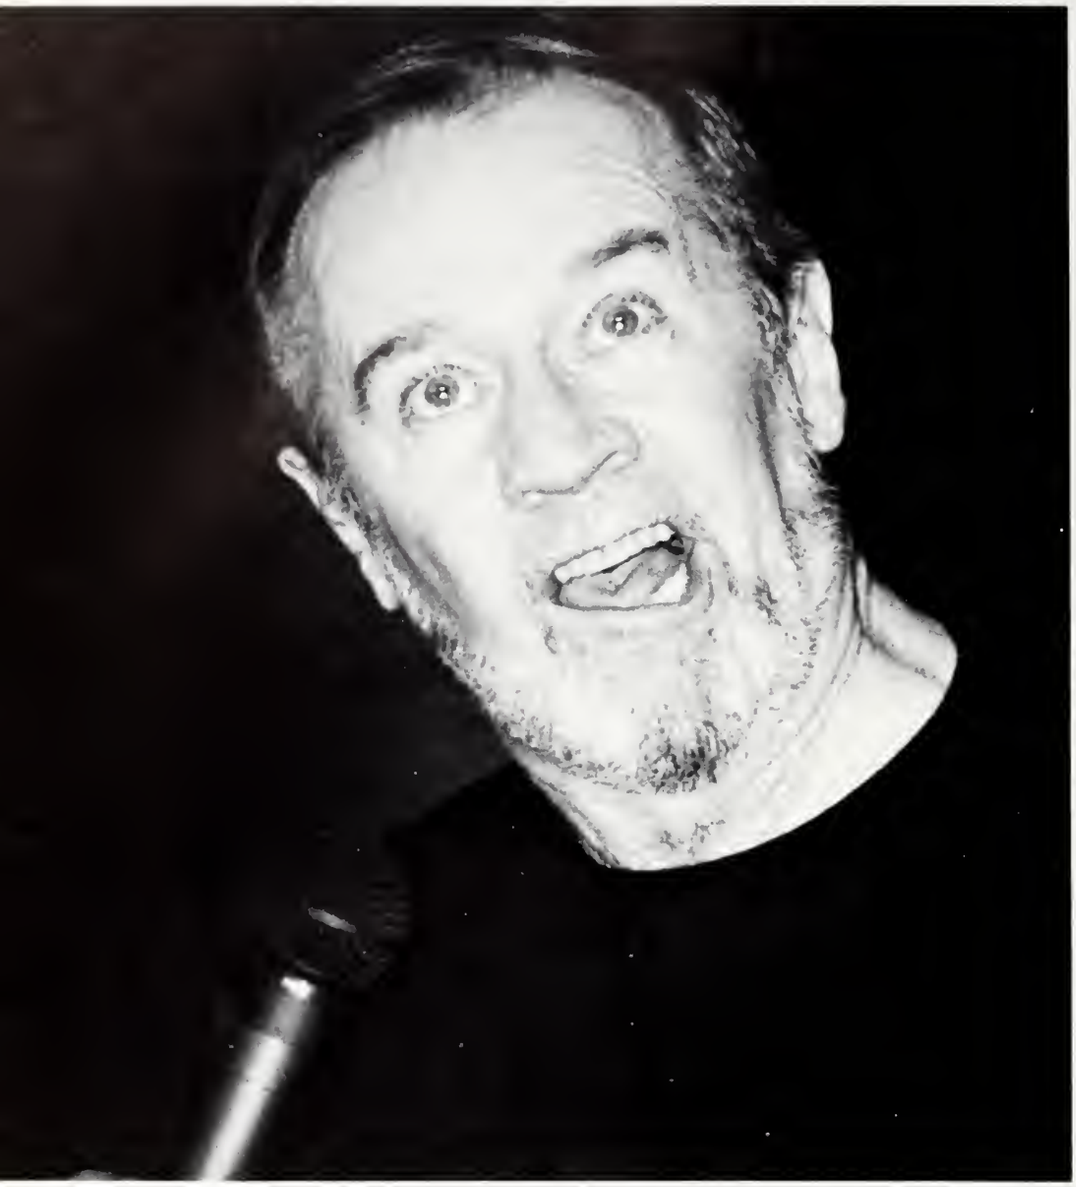
Pointing out that USM is number one, the Key Boardist for the Producers leads the band in another song. The Producer bass player enjoys a moment's break during a grueling set and carries on with some USM supporters.

He really gets the crowd going as the band begins to close their set to the enthusiastic crowd.

And another thing . . . Carlin did some routines that everyone could identify with. One of his segments included a lengthy list of people he could do without.

The man of 1,000 faces. George Carlin kept his audience roaring as he grinned, snickered, and otherwise contracted his face for hilarious effects.



George Carlin

"Seven Dirty Words At Southern"

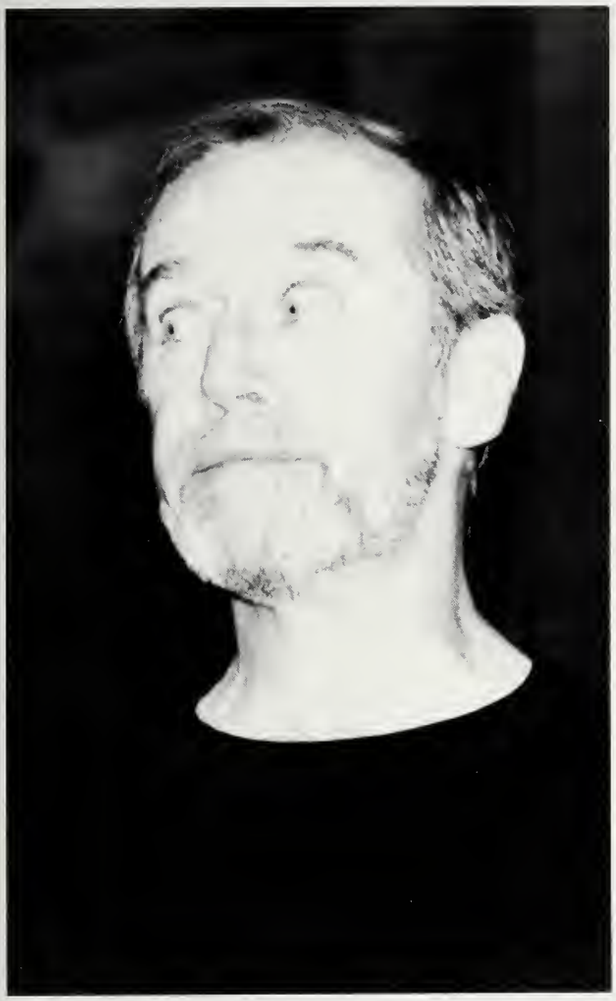
"Seven Dirty Words at Southern" was the theme of comedian George Carlin who entertained a 2,000 plus crowd on October 9th in Bennett Auditorium.

The Carlin Concert was sponsored by the University Activities Council as a part of homecoming and USM's 75th Anniversary Celebration. Haywood Guenard, UAC president, believed that the show attracted more students then most UAC events.

This was the first time Carlin had performed in Mississippi, he said that there were only three states that he had not performed in up until now — Georgia, Ohio, and Mississippi.

Carlin's 90-minute set consisted of a large portion of new material and some of his old classics. To settle the crowds expectations, Carlin ended with his "Seven Dirty Words" routine that left them rolling with excitement and brought the true comic relief to USM.

Below: "I can't believe I said that". Carlin let it all hang out. Right: Really getting into characters has always been one of Carlins greatest strengths. His intense mood and movements had the crowd rolling in the aisles all night long.



Carlin did some of his hardest hitting and probably most controversial material, but there was no monkey business for this homecoming. All of his routines were well received and drew side splitting laughs.

Homecoming 1988

Right: The annual spirit spectacular was held on the Friday before Homecoming. The lobby of the Union was filled with displays pertaining to university life. Above: Dr. Lucas and Powell Ogletree posed with the birthday cake that celebrated USM's 75th birthday.

Homecoming Queen Laurie Mullis was presented to the campus at the Friday night midnight pep rally.

One activity of Homecoming this year was the international fair in the library plaza. Two and a half year old Daisy Park and her mother Won Sun Park wore traditional Korean dresses.

Waldoff's held its eighth annual community wide Homecoming pep rally at the mall. It was at this pep rally that the court was presented to the community.

75th Celebration

The University of Southern Mississippi was not the first name given to the university. In 1912 USM was known as Mississippi Normal College and consisted of five buildings. The idea to raise money was part of the thirty month plan to celebrate USM's 75th anniversary. The goal was to raise 7.5 million dollars in the thirty month plan symbolizing the university's establishment from March 30, 1910 to September 18, 1912. The goal was more than successfully reached as the university earned 10.6 million dollars. The money will be used for construction operation and endorsement toward the university.

Everyone loves the Eagle mascot. This young lady was no exception as she embraced him with a big hug.

Many organizations participated in the annual float building.The Student Alumni Association was one of these such organizations and won 3rd place in theme.

The float created by the men of Delta Tau Delta displayed the beauty and hard work of the floats. This young man seemed taken in by the enormous size of the display.

Dr. Lucas gave an inspiring speech and discussed the past, present, and future of USM.

SAA members Angela Thomson, and Trey Joseph worked late into the night to stuff the float so that the painting could begin.

Due to the 75th Celebration, a convocation was held in Reed Green Coliseum. The faculty was crammed into the upramps as they waited to make their entrance.

Sisterhood between sororities was displayed in many forms during this week. The members of Delta Gamma showed their "closeness" as they worked together late into the night.

Float Building

The Campus Comes Alive

We make many memories during our college days, but this years homecoming activities will bring back historical memories as it marked the 75th Anniversary of USM.

The homecoming events started Friday with the judging of the displays. Friday classes were dismissed from 10:30 a.m. until 1:00 p.m. for the convocation in Reed Green Coliseum. Homecoming this year will be remembered by all for many years to come.

Laurie Mullis Crowned Queen

Laurie Mullis was a senior from Hattiesburg, Mississippi that was majoring in Dietetics. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Mullis of Hattiesburg. Laurie was a member of Chi Omega sorority and was also a Sigma Chi Little Sister. She was very involved in campus and community work. Along with her involvement in Chi Omega she was a campus beauty, 1st alternate to the Miss Mississippi USA, Pike Calendar Girl and Miss Hawaiian Tropics.

Mr. and Miss USM

Being selected Mr. and Miss USM was indeed an honor. Especially since it was a position voted upon by the campus as a whole. Kim Pope of Laurel took her place as Miss USM in November right after the run-off election. Mr. USM, however, ran into the Spring semester. Elliott Voivedich of Biloxi, and Mark Kidd of Quitman had to hold out for another election in February due to an election commission error in voting procedures. Mark Kidd was named Mr. USM on the third of February.

To hold this position was very prestigious. The applicants all held very prominent positions on campus and were very heavily involved in campus and community service. Both Kim and Mark had been named to the1988 USM Who's Who, and belonged to a number of campus honoraries.

Greek God and Goddess

To be selected as the years Greek God and Goddess was not only a privilege, but also an honor for Delta Tau Delta's Bill Powers and Chi Omega's Monica Mosher. During Greek Week, each fraternity and sorority selected a candidate from their organization. The person selected had usually shown leadership and was a junior or senior.They had also displayed work campus and community wide.

During Greek Week there was a parade in which paired fraternities and sororities built floats and paraded their candidates around campus. On Saturday, the morning of the games, the paired fraternities and sororities competed in various events and upon completion of the games, the candidates of the winning fraternity and sorority were named the 1987 Greek God and Goddess.

Greek Week

Greeks pair together for competition

Greek Week gave fraternities and sororities the chance to come together for healthy competition. The fraternities and sororities were paired together, which helped with Greek relations. The week consisted of various events, from a parade, in which the paired groups displayed their candidates for Greek God and Goddess, to the actual games on Saturday morning. Most fraternities held swaps for their counterparts also.

The games were fun for all those who participated, and for those who chose to spectate. Among the games were Dizzy Bat, the three legged race, and the sack race. The one game in which more seriousness took place was the tug-o-war, which the men of Sigma Nu, and the Ladies of Alpha Delta Pi dominated. The overall winners of the games however, were the men of Delta Tau Delta, and the ladies of Chi Omega.

The week was extremely successful and everyone enjoyed it. Chi Omega's Monica Mosher and Delta Tau Delta's Bill Powers took their places as the 1987 Greek God and Goddess.

Members of the Sigma Nu Tug-o-war team surprised everyone. No one could match their strength, and Sigma Nu won this event.

Below: "Everybody-do this!" All of the members of the Outfield got together to get the crowd up. Tony Lewis was following through on a backstage promise. "It is a good audience, we are going to rock!"

The Outfield

"We Are Going To Rock"

On October 4, in Reed Green Coliseum, The Outfield drew one of the largest audiences in several years to USM's campus.

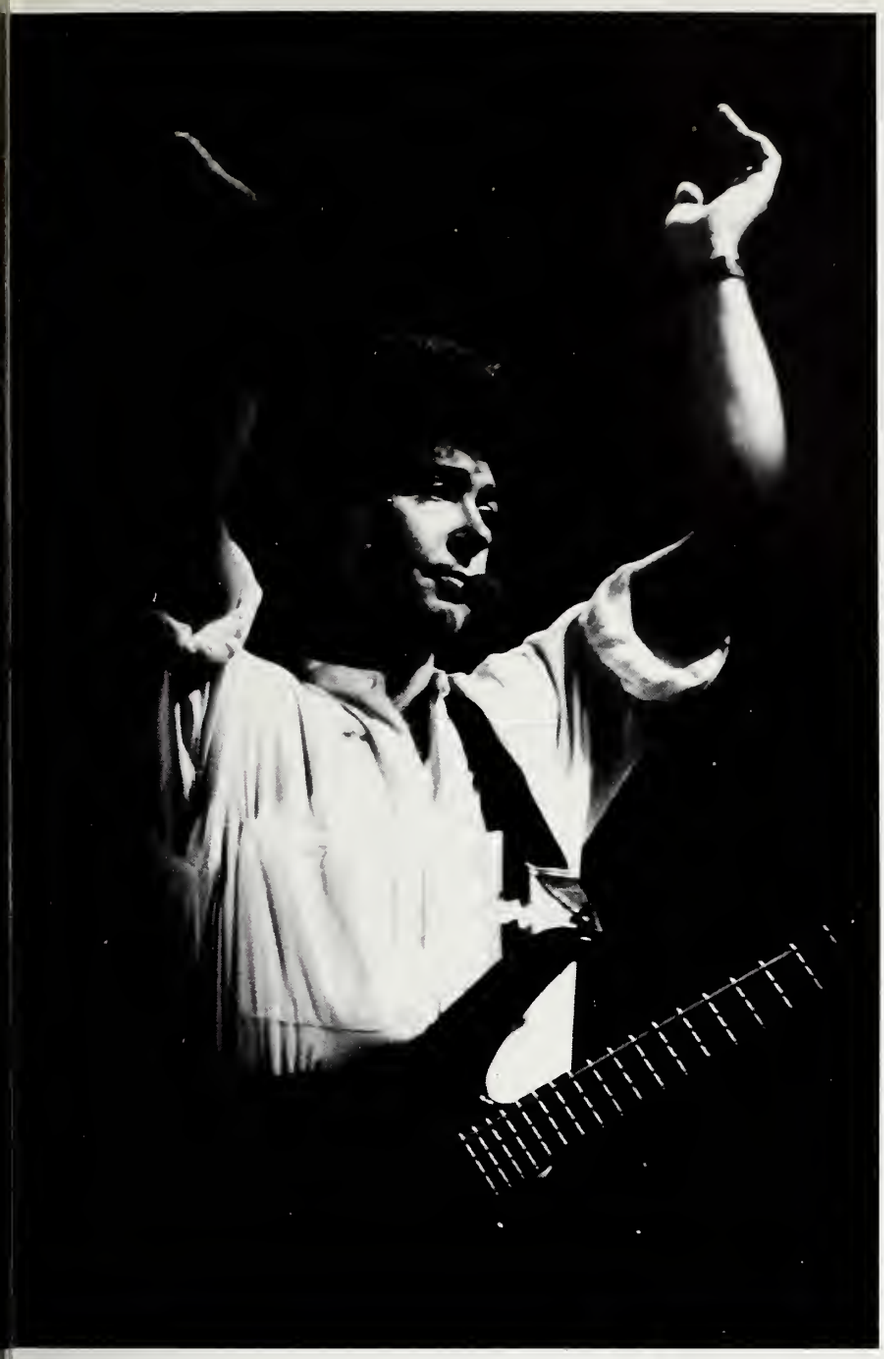
The Outfield has been called Outstanding in the field of rock and roll. The band with its straight form of rock music drew more than 3,000 people to their concert sponsored by the University Activities Council. The groups performances included several numbers from their debut album "Play Deep," and their most recent album "Bangin."

The British band who started in London, comprised on Tony Lewis, bass and lead guitarist, and Alan Jackman drums, John Spinks guitar, gave USM students a truly entertaining rock concert.

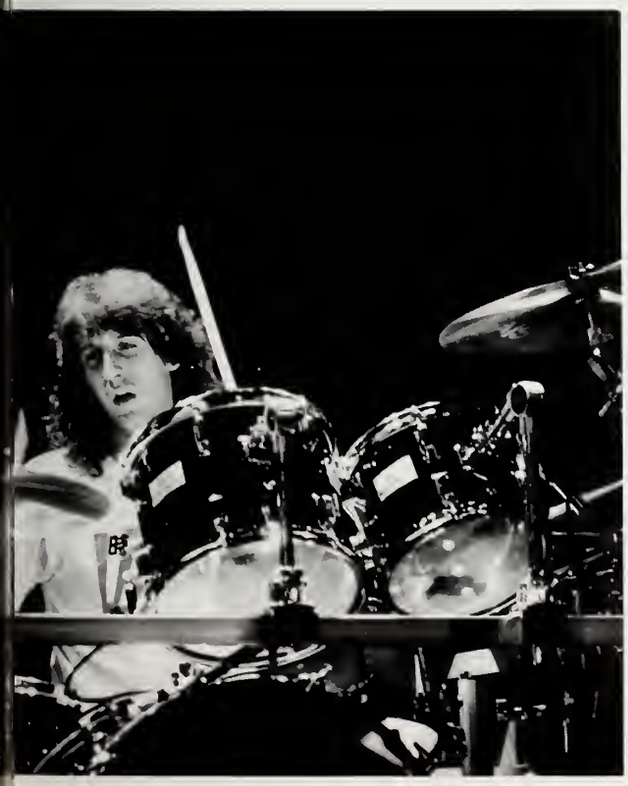
Lewis said that there was an edge here in America because music is more acceptable simply because American people tend to judge bands by their music and not their image.

The band started touring in September and opened for Night Ranger for the first half of their tour. The Outfield wanted to see if they could stand on their own feet.

Lewis credits The Outfields success to a group concept and a total band effort on each of their parts.



Left: Lewis lets himself go on the first verse of "Somewhere in America." The band poured on some intense emotions on stage. Below: Chaotic aftermath. It is a rare event for anyone but the roadies to see chairs strewn all over the floor after the concert goers are gone. An enthusiastic crowd did plenty of "Damage" to the area.



Left: Alan Jackman or "Plug" pounded out plenty of driving rythums all night long and never missed a beat. Above: Tony Lewis breaks down the barriers and gets as close to his audience as he can as he sings "No Surrender."

Jr. Panhellenic Talent Show

In February the Jr. Panhellenic Talent Show took place at USM. There were a variety of talents displayed at this event. Everything from singing to dancing was represented. Pamela Polard, a Pi Beta Phi received first with her magic fingers at the piano. Her sorority sister Laura Ingram won second while singing "Sister" from the movie The Color Purple. Sherry Golden received third with her tap dancing.

MISS SOUTHERN

Miss Southern for 1988 was Millie Ivy. She was crowned by last year's winner Mitzi Swanson. The four runners up were Stacy Graves, Patricia Purser, Leah Friend, and Mary Ann Kyle. In the fall a reception was held for the participants at the Alumni House. This gave them a chance to get to know one another a little better, and also gave them a chance to check out the competition.

Swimsuits was probably the favorite of all the events, especially for the men of the audience. Stacey Veramonti displayed this competition well.

Monique Brooks displayed her beautiful dress for the judges during the evening gown competition.

In November, a reception was held at the Alumni House for the Miss Southern candidates. The candidates for the pageant were: Nina Williams, Carol Lee Chatham, Stacy Palmer, Leah Friend, Monique Brooks, Kris Gaines, Stephanie Beck, Carolin Flowers, Sheila Frost, Patricia Purser, Stacey Graves, Marry Ann Kyle, Kelli Cartee, Sonia Bush, Michelle Fields, Melind Rayner, Deanna Miles, and Millie Ivy.

The Spring Semester hosts a number of plays, some of which included "The Wood Gatherer" and "The Opera."

USM Theater

Bringing the Best to Southern's Campus

USM's theater department gave the university a number of fine productions throughout the year. Hedda Gabler and the Opera were just to name a couple. The Theater department is inside the College of Fine Arts which was one of USM's pride and joys. Students were given the opportunity to put their practices to use by performing in the many productions offered by The University of Southern Mississippi. The Opera was probably the best performance of the year. These productions were presented to the community as well, and some of them took place at the Performing Arts Center.

Hedda Gabler, Henrik Isben's classic drama opened in the Hartwig Arena Theatre. It was directed by Dr. I. Blaine Quarnstrom. It was a tragic story of a late 18th century woman consumed with self destruction. The performance ran from September 29th unitl October 3rd.

No one was surprised by the excellent performances of the University students. The long hours of hard work paid off as their productions came together and were praised by everyone who had the opportunity to see them.

10 EXCUSES FOR SKIPPING CLASS

The beginning of a new school year meant students once again made resolutions to buckle down, study hard, and not skip classes unless it was absolutely necessary. Absolutely necessary meant sickness to the point of death. But you still had two or three days you could miss in some classes without being penalized, so this resolution was soon interupted by trips to the mall and watching movie's, or just by sleeping late for a change. Throughout the course of the year the top ten excuses for missing classes were:

1 IT WAS MONDAY. The first day of the week found many students still longing for the weekend.

2 IT WAS FRIDAY. Some students couldn't wait for the weekend to get started.

3 THE BEACH WAS CALLING. Catching some rays won over going to classes when the weather got warm.

4 YOU HAD TO STUDY FOR ANOTHER TEST. There was nothing like waiting until the last minute. Many students missed an early class in order to prepare for a late one.

Left: In January many students chose to skip their early morning classes even before Dr. Lucas cancelled classes for the day. Below: Some students skipped class because they felt they just did not look quite right.

5 THE SOAPS WERE ON. For addicts of "Guiding Light" and "Days of Our Lives", some episodes could not be missed.

6 YOU JUST COULD NOT GET OUT OF THE BED. The covers just would not come off.

7 YOU HAD NOTHING TO WEAR. A closet full of clothes didn't count when the right outfit was in the laundry.

8 THERE WAS NO ELECTRICITY. A popular plea for those living off campus after a thunderstorm and a favorite among the women.

9 IT WAS RAINING. The old excuse of 'Rain means sleeping weather" was claimed throughout the year by students.

10 IT WAS YOUR BIRTHDAY. A special day to do what you wanted didn't include going to school.

HOW TO NOT STUDY!

Heaven forbid for anyone to study! It certainly was not thought of as "cool" to miss a great party because you had to study. But it was important to at least think you were studying, or even to just look like you were. How many times did you leave messages in your room that if your parents called your roomate was to tell them you were in the library STUDYING. When it actually came to studying, you could always pull out your books, then get up and empty your trash can, find your notebooks, sharpen your pencil, answer the phone, call someone, straighten your desk, get a coke, and go to the bathroom. All of these were perfectly good things to do while putting off studying. Some of the best procrastination methods were:

1 CALL SOMEONE.
Don't get left behind on the latest gossip, and, for sure, don't give anyone the impression that you are not sociable.

2 DO YOUR NAILS.
Women only. A good idea when doing this is to open all of your books and appear to be studying.

3 EMPTY THE TRASH.
It's totally impossible, irrational, irresponsible, and unheard of to study in a room with trash. Get rid of it.

4 GO JOGGING.
Distance doesn't really matter, just time. The longer you're gone the more likely you'll forget about having to study.

5 TAKE A SHOWER.
Hot or cold, it doesn't matter. You can never be too clean.

6 EAT A SNACK.
But don't settle for just anything. Make sure your craving can't be quenched unless you totally search the kitchen, then go down to the Pick a Pack.

7 WATCH TELEVISION.
Not a thrity minute sit-com, though. Make sure it's a three hour mini-series to be shown for the next four nights.

8 CLEAN YOUR ROOM.
Use only as a last resort.

9 GO TO A MOVIE.
Tuesday was usually a good night to go. "Dollar Night" also meant that a lot of your friends would be there.

10 WRITE LETTERS.
But never send them. That way you can always re-write what you wrote later.

Sitting around the suite gave roommates the chance to catch up on the latest gossip and avoid the study habit.

Delta Gamma Anchor Splash

One of the major events of the Spring Semester for the fraternity and sororities was Delta Gamma's Anchor Splash. This put them against one another in a variety of swimming events. Independent groups also participated in this event, and had for the past three years. Along with the swimming events, a Miss Eyes and a Mr. Anchor Splash were elected during the week by the Student Body.

Above: Working together was a requirement for all of the events. Those teams that worked well together usually came out ahead. Right: Prepared to continue the relay, Chi Omega's Traci Richmond Prepares to dive in.

Left: Due to fire codes, the number of spectators allowed inside the nat was limited. Many people, however, came out to cheer the teams on to victory. Below: The boat race was another popular event. Many participants found it difficult to stay in the boats.

Coming of Age

LIVING GROUPS

Whether off-campus sweating out the electric bill, or staring at an empty refrigerator, or in the halls dreading your next meal or waiting for the mail to come in, or in a fraternity or sorority trying to maintain that grade point average or wondering who you will take to next weeks functions, or at home with mom and dad trying to explain why you keep coming in at 4 a.m. or commuting everyday from Laurel or Wiggins hoping you don't get stopped for your overdue inspection sticker, we are all victims of the group we chose to live with.

But remember, when things get too bad, you can reassure yourself by laughing at those who didn't have enough sense to choose your living group.

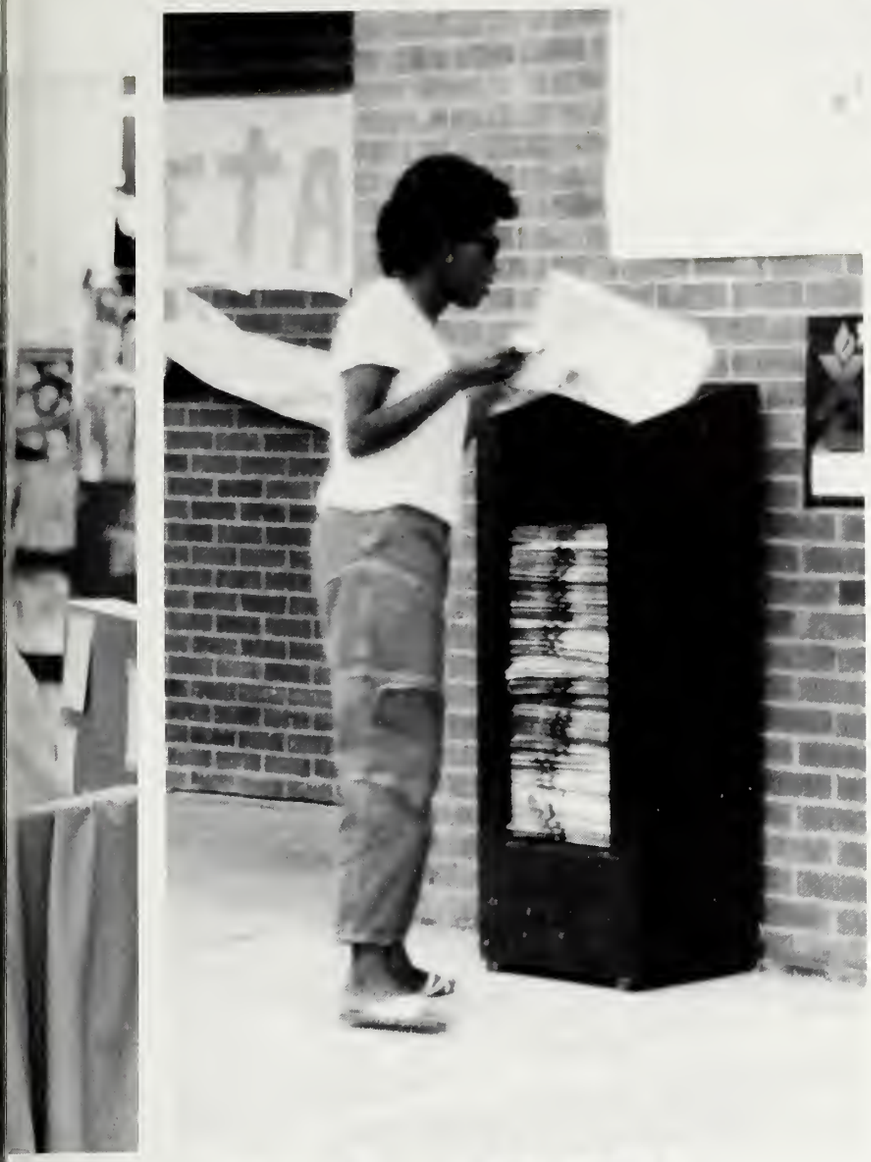
Left: Resident hall life was fun for those who took the time to get to know one another. Mississippi Hall residents were often seen in sixes due to the newly renovated suites.

These Pi Beta Phi members shared fun and good times as members of USM's Greek system. Sisterhood was strong among sororities as was brotherhood among the fraternities.

Dorm Life

Living in the resident's hall brought about many changes for some individuals. It meant coming from a room of your own to share with another individual, who sometimes was a total stranger. It meant coming and going as you pleased, provided you did not set off the alarms after seven o'clock. There was no one to tell you when to go to bed, or what time to come in. You could do what you wanted when and where you wanted to. For some it was their first time away from home. Students learned to adjust so that they could stand to live with one another for the semester. Many students sought new roommates at the end of the fall semester, but many were content to stick it out for another semester.

Right: For those students without a car, the University Hub was their only means of shopping. Below: The university gameroom in the Union was a popular spot for many residents.



Above: All residents were required to purchase a mealcard and eat in the Commons. Left: The Student Printz kept residents aware of the on campus events.

Left: All residents were required to have a Southern Station Box. Many students that were away from home for the first time found an empty mail box very disappointing. Below: Couples seemed to pop in and out of the resident halls during visitation.

GREEKS

Toga Swaps were popular between many fraternities and sororities. ADPi members had their swap with the KA chapter in early September. Laurie Brock and Yvonne Rivard shared many happy times together in ADPi. Sority life brought girls from all over the nation together to form new found friendships and sisters.

Another swap for the ADpis was the "Come as You Are" Swap they had with the Delts.

Tonya was a member of Knight's Chapel, where she served as pianist. While in high school she participated in numerous clubs, served as drum major of the marching band, and was class salutatorian. In the summer of 1985, Tonya began her studies here at USM in the field of music education and English. During her short period here, she was a member of Mu Phi Epsilon Music Fraternity and the University Singers. Tonya left this world on November 25, 1987, in a tragic car accident. Left: Many students that lived off campus still chose to shop at the Hub for USM shirts aand other materials. Below: Students that lived off campus and had to walk to the campus, chose comfortable shoes.

Off Campus Living

While a number of students chose to live in the resident's hall, there were a majority of students who chose to live off campus as well. Living off campus meant renting a home or apartment. Those who chose to live in apartments found that noise and parties did not set very well with their neighbors. One of the major advantages of your own place was that you could decorate it any way that you like provided you did not repaint the walls or nail into them. The carpet was usually brown or green and the walls were either white or a creamy beige. Those that lived off campus found it exciting and those that moved from the dorms out into the community found a lot more freedom than those that lived in apartments from the start.

ORGANIZATIOI

Making the overall appearance of a university friendly or intimidating to the students was what an organization could do. USM provided for the students a variety of clubs and honor societies. Individuals were able to pool together with other students that had these same interest. Because of this the individual was able to expand his knowledge and talents.

The University Activities Council was very well recognized on campus. They provided us with entertainment greats such as: George Carlin, The Producers, and the Outfield.

USM's Student Alumni Association worked hard this year. Several members attended the National and District Conventions held in Clemson South Carolina, and Athens Georgia.

The Band Was Good . . .

What rowdy bunch of seniors could be heard above everyone at USM home football games? Why, the marching band of course! The ecucated group of musicians added color during football season. For each game there was a new show to learn, complete with music and marching drill. After performing the pre-game and half time show, the band led spirited cheers in the stands that ranged in tone from mild to borderline obscenity. In mediocre seasons they are often the only ones cheering.

Dixie Darlings

The nationally acclaimed Dixie Darlings delighted many crowds at USM games. They were, as a group disappointed though that the strut had been removed from their routine by the new band director.. After a number of complaints from students and alumni, a small version of the strut was replaced. The team consisted of 48 young ladies who gave a number of hours each week to produce new shows for the spectators.

SPORTS

Everywhere you looked—sports was there. Whether the team had a great season or a not so great campaign, the people were talking. Sports surrounded us everyday. Whether it was football practice or intramural softball, sports was an everyday influence on our lives. Yelling for the Black and Gold made every ballgame special. And the "true Eagle fans" remained—win or lose.

USM offered eight men's varsity, four women's varsity, and several club and intramural sports. At USM there was something for everyone.

1987 NIT champion Basketball Team showed their true champion form during the 1988 season. Point guard and team captain Casey Fisher led the team to many victories including that of Memphis State and Louisville.

Cross Country members Joe Lindsey and Jerry Dendinger took instructions from their coach Ed Barnes.

USM Football Brings "Eagle Fever" to M. M. Robert's Stadium

When a team is undefeated with a conference championship ring on their fingers—everyone wants to be part of the action. People automatically walk up and pat players on their backs and tell them how proud they are. The locker rooms are filled with reporters and handshakers, and shouts of victory fill the air.

But when a team goes without a win, there are no congratulatory handshakes, and no conference ring, and the locker rooms are filled with silence, except for an occasional sigh from a college senior who realizes that he has played the last game of his career.

The year for the Eagles started out innocently enough as far as predictions of success go. It seemed that no matter how many games the Eagles won or lost, they could not fill the stands at the games. After a somewhat disappointing season, Head Coach Jim Carmody resigned leaving USM to find a new coach for the 1988 season.

Head Coach Jim Carmody watched intently as the Eagles pulled away a victory over Jackson State. Carmody and his assistants worked well together to insure a safe game for their players.

Left: USM running backs were often seen being chased by the opposition. Above: USM's first seasonal touchdown against Tulane brought Eagle fans to their feet. Right: USM had a young quarterback this year and had high hopes for the seasons to come.

USM's R. Weeks scores a touchdown during the fourth quarter against Texas A&M. C. Powell celebrates the completed pass from Brett Farve at third and five.

Left: Going, Going, Gone! Above: USM players often chose to leap, jump, and scramble to gain that extra yardage.

Left: USM vs. Texas A&M, second quarter and eight at the nineteen yard line, Brett Farve scrambles to the thirteen yard line with a gain of six and 11:40 left in the quarter. Below: Joe Pearson brings down a Texas A&M player after a gain of fourteen yards. Minutes later Southern scored their first touchdown to tie the score at seven to seven.

USM's center guarded quarterback Brett Farve. The protection of the offensive line gave USM an edge on many occasions.

USM's offense was very good at finding the open hole and scrambling to gain the extra yardage to score the much needed touchdowns.

The quarterback yells out plays to his offensive line. USM players were always ready to protect the quarterback to insure his safety and protect the possibility of a win.

Above: USM's defense was on the attack against Memphis State.The Eagles were always there to help one another out to bring an opposing runningback.

The Golden Eagles were a very close net team. The huddles gave the player the chance to plan their strategy whether it was offense or defense.

Rugby

USM's Newer Sport

The 1987 fall season opener was against the Crimson Tide of Alabama. After leading at the half, USM lost to the Tide 16-9. The following week, they played in their first Deep South Rugby Tournament and lost to LSU, but redeemed themselves with a victory over Rice Univeristy. Due to scheduling problems, the next three games were forfeited by USM's opponents. USM traveled to Memphis State in a one sided match. Southern's fall season ended with a 6-3 record.

Two of USM's outstanding players, Ricky Conrad and Scott McCathran were chosen to play on the Deep South Select Side team, along with other teammates from Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi Universities.

Sportsmanship was something carried between both teams. Injured players were often helped off the field by members of both squads.

Basketball

Eagle Style

Everyone expected the best out of the 1988 Eagle Squad, and they made sure that they delivered. After the winning of the 1987 NIT the Eagles returned this season in full force.They defeated big name teams such as Memphis State, Louisville, and South Carolina. They were also named into the top twenty for the first time in USM's history. Everyone was very excited about the Golden Eagle basketball season, and there were just not enough tickets to go around. From the late night camp out for tickets to the Louisville game resulted a bill through the ASB Senate to create better ticket acquiring policies. The Eagles gave pride to the campus and made other major colleges look our way for a means of competition. We are very proud of you guys, and we know that you gave it your best.

The Eagles victory over Memphis State left them ready to face the Cardinals of Louisville.

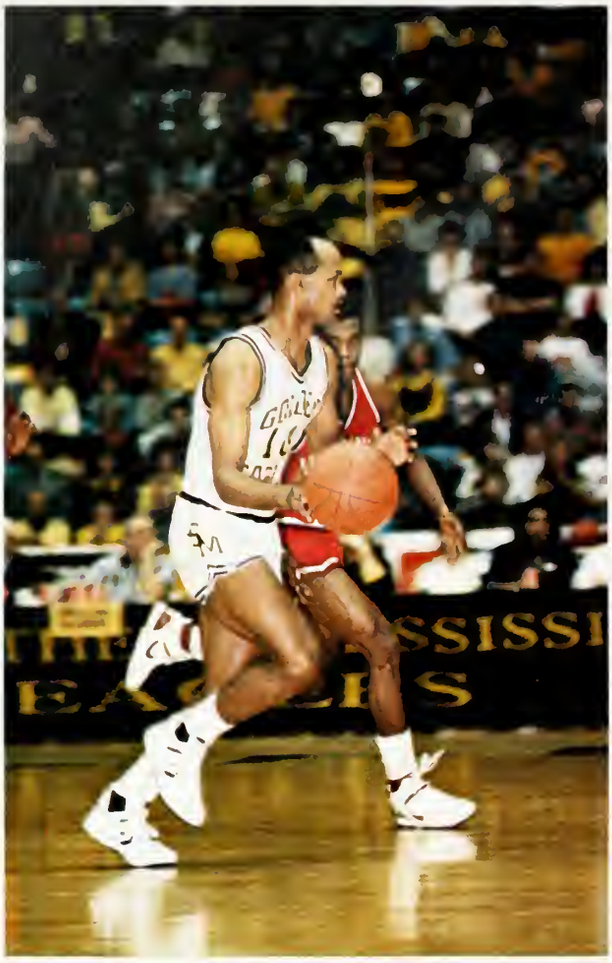
Above: Randy Pettus was not only short, but also quick. His ability to stop and start suddenly made him an asset to the squad. Right: Senior Casey Fisher not only aided the team with his ball handling skills, but he also scored many points, either three pointer, or layups, for the Eagles.



Captain, Casey Fisher, led the Eagles in scoring during many games. Casey was a senior from Utica, Mississippi.

Many clubs and organizations made banners and signs to show everyone that they had the "Eagle Fever" and confidence in our team.

Above: USM's Darrin Chancelor was often seen flying through the air. Whether it was a dunk or a aly-oup, Eagle fans were always on their feet. Right: Randolph Keys was seen dunking on several occasions during USM's victory over Memphis State. The Eagles work and determination led them to numerous victories over top ranked teams.

Do It Right

The success of the Golden Eagles came as no surprise to those members of the Metro Conference. After last years squad walked away with the NIT, and only lost one senior, it was expected that the '88 squad be named into the top 20. This occurred on January 25, for the first time in USM history. After the victories over Memphis State and Louisville everyone knew that there was no stopping the Golden Eagles. The win over Louisville gave them a nine game winning streak and the confidence to beat any team in the conference—one team at a time.

Coach Turk, who had already proven himself as a successful coach,would need to work the same wizardry in recruiting to replace the three scoring machines he was losing.

Above: Derrick Hamilton amazed everyone with his ability to "fly" through the air. Dunks were a familiar sight at USM games and the Dunk Corner kept track of them all.

It was rare for one of the Basketball games to not be sold out. Both the students and the alumni came out to cheer the Golden Eagles to victory.

Randy Pettus, despite his small size, was no match for many members of the opposing teams. His abilities of handling the ball and his increditable jumping made him an asset to the team.

The Coaching staff for the Lady Eagles was outstanding. Head Coach Kay James called plays to her squad from the sidelines.

Renee Magee was a very experienced defensive player for the Lady Eagles. She assisted the Eagles with a number of stolen balls and caused many turnovers for the opposing teams.

Renee Magee, despite her small size, was also an asset for the Eagles with her speed and incredible jumping abilities.

Left: The offense for the Lady Eagles often set up picks to aide their teammates in an open shot or pass. Above: The quickness of the Eagles, gave them an edge over many teams. Point guard Renee Magee was a definite asset of this ability.

Lady Eagles Basketball Done Right

Basketball, like all sports, has always been deemed as a male dominated sport. The ladies of the Golden Eagles basketball team I am sure would not admit to this.

The ladies had a very positive attitude about the sport, and they should, after winning the Metro the year before. They looked to each game as a challenge, and never gave up even when the going got tough.

The Lady Eagles basketball team exemplifies the word determination. Through their continual hard work and strong endurance they have put together quite an impressive record. Congratulations Lady Eagles on a job well done!

Right: Sharon Varnado was one of the Lady Eagles best rebounders. She was effective both offensively and defensively. Below: Renee Magee was very effective for USM in the scoring department. Her speed enabled her to move past defenders for the easy layups.

Far Below: Lesha Franklin was another quick player for the Lady Eagles. Her rebounding abilities and fast breaks gave her an edge over many players.

Above: Another aspect in which the Lady Eagles were very strong was on the free throw line. These extra points helped pull the girls to victory on many occasions. Left: Ball handling is a very important skill in the game of basketball. USM's point guard was very well practiced in this department.

USM Soccer

Coach Frank Glassmer described the 1987 Golden Eagles soccer squad as being loaded. They only lost one senior to graduation and had the best collection of talent since he had been coaching in the last four years. Glassmer felt that in the four years the team had come a long way in terms of talent. He stated that in the past he had started people that could not sit on USM's bench today. The squad from the year before stumbled through a losing record but were competitive in each game. USM's team had a good defense and moved the ball well.

Since the soccer team is not a varsity team supported by the athletic department the team must raise the money and count on donations to buy equipment. The team also hosts a clinic for younger players in the Hattiesburg area to raise money.

USM's Tommy Cason goes for the ball while a Tulane opponent tries his best to stop him in the home season opener.

USM not only supported the men's soccer team but also showed enthusiasm towards the women's squad.

The soccer team was seen practicing on many occasions. Stamina and endurance were needed to continue the fast pace of the grueling game of soccer.

USM soccer players looked forward to the season opener against Loyola. Soccer required more than just the ability to run up and down the field but also the ability to dribble the ball with your feet against an opponent.

Coming of Age

PEOPLE

After all is boiled down to the barest and most basic essentials the real "spice of life" are those amazingly unpredictable bipedal life-forms which constantly surround us. Your basic, simple, natural human being; your instructor, your advisor, the guy next door with the 24 hour party, the gorgeous blonde in chem lab, your RA, the house mother, the officer behind the flashing lights, your mother, and the new guy with those intelligent, witty eyes. Nothing on the face of the earth comes in more varied patterns, shapes, sizes, and frames of mind. Good, bad, indifferent, people will remain individual people and though two may meet and share common interest no two will ever, thankfully, be exactly alike.

Hundreds of USM students camped out in the R.C. Cook University Union trying to get tickets to the USM/Louisville basketball game. Only an hour and 42 minutes after the tickets went on sale at 8 a.m., they were gone.

Faculty members were often invited to Faculty Teas held in their honor to bring students and their instructors closer together.

The University of Southern Mississippi has come far in this past year, and Dr. Aubrey Lucas has spent yet another successful year at the helm of the institution as President. Although there were many accomplishments made by the faculty, staff, and students here, USM also had its share of setbacks and problems. Dr. Lucas found time one Friday afternoon to reflect on past events and discuss future plans.

One of the most prominent issues concerning everyone at USM is the decreasing number of students enrolled in the University and how to halt this trend. Dr. Lucas stated that he felt there were multiple reasons for the downturn in student population, the first and foremost causes being the fee increases for textbooks and food services and the decrease in available financial aid. Lucas quoted a statistic, saying, "We are now able to meet only 90% of the financial need per individual." He also cited increased competition from out-of-state schools as a possible reason for the decrease. Lucas described remedies such as improving advisement, streamlining the registration procedures, and developing the USM 101 course for new students.

On the other side of the coin, one of the bright spots in the past year was the completion of USM's 75th Anniversary Celebration. The President reported that the campaign was tremendously successful and exceeded the contribution goal of 7.5 million by almost 4 million. "We discovered, in this campaign, new sources of support, and we will continue to build on this support as we develop," commented Lucas. He said that he felt this event helped create a heightened awareness of the University, especially through the pictorial history of USM entitled "Dearly Bought and Deeply Treasured," by Chester Morgan. Lucas also explained that he hoped USM would be kept in the limelight by the accomplishments of USM in their respective fields. Lucas also stated that he felt there is at least one program every week such as a lecture, forum, concert, sporting event, or other student activity that keeps USM visible to the community and to prospective students.

Dr. Lucas is also very excited about the new state government administration being moved into place in the Governor's Mansion in Jackson under the leadership of Ray Maybus. "This is an exciting time for higher education in Mississippi!" Lucas exclaimed. He continued, "There is a new legislature and new leadership that is very aggressive, full of energy, and has vision of what can be, and they have demonstrated their dedication to education through the new budget and its appropriations for education."

Dr. Lucas noted that he felt another of USM's greatest assets is its students. He commented that he felt the students were handling changing policies well, pointing to the new alcohol policy and the presence of the AIDS epidemic in American society. Lucas admitted that it is difficult to assess student opinions and attitudes when he is so close to them. He mentioned that he did not know if student behaviors were changing, but he was pleased with the open discussion and the exchange of information about them. Lucas also insisted that the University had a responsibility to the students here, who want to be fed, housed, and educated by an outstanding institution. He maintained, "This is a great place to be, but in this bureaucracy, we sometimes mishandle students' needs and desires, but we always do our best to correct these problems. I love my students and interacting with them. That is the fun of being President!"

Lucas also expressed his satisfaction with student support of school-sponsored events. He asserted that things had changed drastically in his twelve years as President and that institutions are now dealing with a better quality student. "We have a marvelously rich variety of activities on campus; so many, in fact, that you would flunk out if you tried to attend every function," said Lucas. He continued, "And yet it seems some students try. They appear to be genuinely interested in what we have to offer outside the classroom."

Lucas was also excited about USM's role in its surrounding community and its numerous charitable endeavors. He cited substantial monetary donations and volunteer projects that were made and organized by members of the University community. Dr. Lucas stated that he felt this was because USM wanted to be a good community member.

The President has high hopes for the coming year. His biggest aspiration is to have the changes from the reorganizational study implemented, and, while he feels that these changes will mean a more efficiently and effectively run institution, he acknowledged that several years would be required to make all the necessary improvements and refinements. Dr. Lucas wishes that the University was better funded in order to raise teachers' salaries; increase and improve equipment; make the library more adequate; and provide more scholarships for students. He said he was interested in physical repairs and improvements including construction of the polymer science complex; completion of a HYPER facility; and a new physical fitness activities center. Lucas also expressed his hopes to see a larger student body; an increase in faculty and staff personnel; four sellouts at M.M. Roberts Stadium; a sellout at every Reed Green Coliseum game; and standing-room-only at every lecture, exhibition, and concert.

Finally, Dr. Lucas discussed his proudest moments and disappointments at the University. He was most upset over the lack of funding for everything. He stated that most problems revolved around budget difficulties, but he manages to find a bright spot in everything. "I believe I am proudest of the caliber of our faculty here, not just because of their teaching but also because of their scholarship and the attention that they bring to USM."

Dr. Lucas anticipates another successful year at Southern. He promised, "I can be excited about next year because I know I can look forward to some outstanding accomplishments from our faculty and staff and the contributions of our students.

Hall of Fame 1987

Being selected to the University of Southern Mississippi's Hall of Fame was indeed an honor. The students selected held high positions among student body organizations and excelled academically as well. Each had also been selected into the Who's Who Among American College Students. These selected few belonged to various honor societies, and were a combination of greeks and independents. Hall of Fame was the highest honor given to a student at USM, each individual that received this award was very proud.

Lee Marvin

Jackie Gleason

Lorne Greene

DEATHS: LEE MARVIN, the gravel-voiced Oscar winner who died at the age of 63, was remembered by colleagues as an actor who really was among the good guys even though he often protrayed the hard as nails rogue. JACKIE GLEASON, the rotund "Great One" who got laughs and riches as a blutstering bus driver in the television series "The Honeymooners" died in June at the age of 71. LORNE GREENE, who for 14 years played the firm but gentle father to three sons on televisions "Bonanza," died in September at the age of 72.

A new face was welcomed at USM this year. Ron Harkins was hired as the new director of the Pride. He brought many changes to the Universities halftime programs, some which were met with much opposition. He eliminated the strut from the Dixie Darling performance which did not set well with the students or alumni. However, the overall halftime shows were very well done and a definite improvement.

UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN MISSISSIPPI

usm

1910-1985 1912-1987

The making of a university
After 75 years a new—but old look.

In Retrospect

Many changes have taken place over the last 75 years for the University of Southern Mississippi. What started out as Mississippi Normal College in 1912, has turned into one of the nations major universities. In 1932, Mississippi Normal College became the State Teachers College. The only buildings on campus at this time were College Hall, Mississippi Hall, The Alumni House (President Home), Southern Hall, and Hattiesburg Hall. From the early start of five buildings, USM has grown to over 120 buildings and 640 acres. In 1940, the name of the school changed once again and it now became, Mississippi Southern College. However, in 1962, a bill was passed changing the name to what we know her as today, The University of Southern Mississippi. Mississippi Southern's first class had 230 students and its population continued to grow. Today USM has approximately 12,000 students and 6,000 faculty members. This university has come of age over the last 75 years, and we can all be proud that we have been a part of the growth. The University of Southern Mississippi has "Come of Age."

Below: In 1940, Teas and Receptions were very common, especially among organizations. Right: Dr. J.G. George was president of Mississippi Southern in 1940.

The Nationally Acclaimed Dixie Darlin's had uniforms that were very different then those of today. They were a trilling team as well as a dancing squad, and consisted of 50 girls.

Above: Things on campus still remain the same. Right: Soda Fountains were very popular. Dates as well as friends were often found hanging around.

1959

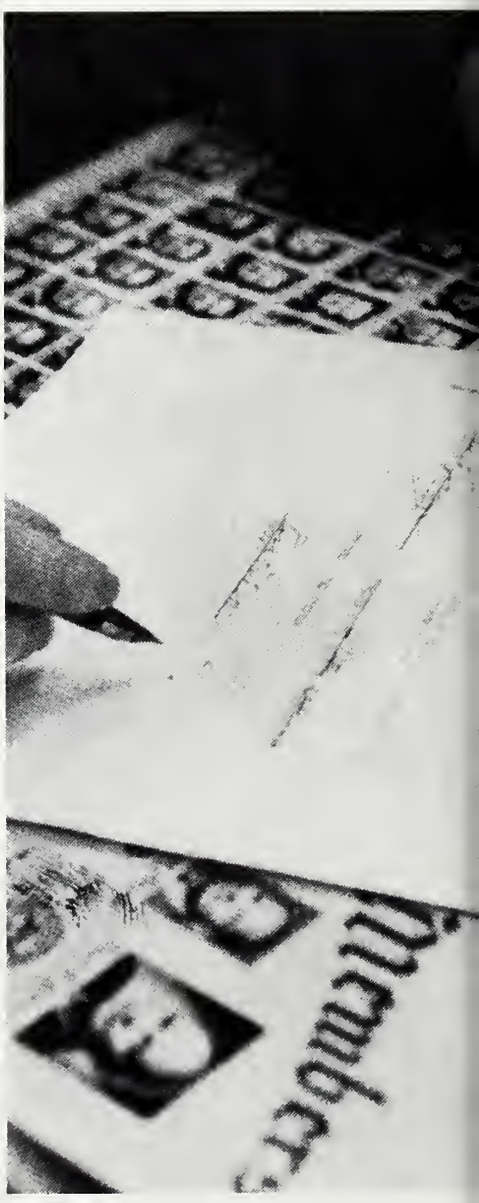
Unlike today, most students took advantage of these events. Below: The dress of the late 1950's is not to be forgotten.

STUDENT SERVICES

1962

By an act of the legislature of the State of Mississippi, Mississippi Southern College, established in 1910, was abolished and the University of Southern Mississippi was organized when Governor Ross R. Barnett signed the act at 2:10 p.m. on Tuesday, February 27, 1962.

Left: Pep Rallies were a big deal at USM in the 60's. They were held outside the Student Services Building. Below Left: Between classes was just as confusing then as it is now. Below: The signing of the bill making MSC/USM.



Campus Beauties have always been extremely popular at USM. They consisted of 10 beauties and alternate beauties as well. Below: House Mothers were used in the girl dormitories to provide the girls with guidance and to be "a mother away from home."

1988

Mr. Powell Ogletree and Tracy Barber served punch at the Alumni House for a USM alumni function.

Above: As the year came to a close, students began to feel the excitement of summer and the emptiness of the distance placed between friends. The empty stadium awaited the beginning of the fall semester when everyone would be reunited again for the year. Right: At homecoming sorority members stuffed their floats for the display competition.

"A Coming of Age" is for today. A yearbook cannot begin to capture every event and aspect of a university—a couple meeting for the first time, the emotion involved in the acceptance of a bid to join a sorority and the every day sounds of the pads and helmets clashing on the practice field. But it can remind you of something special—something you may remember forever as a part of USM's coming of age.

It seems like only yesterday when we came to campus with the crisp autumn breeze warning us of winter's approach. Yet so many things have occured during the year. We elected a new student body president, had our annual visit from Brother Jim, and reveled in the glory of a winning basketball team. Everything seems to fall into place as we take with us the fact that we were a part of a coming of age.

Nugget was very apparent on USM's campus. Students and campus visitors, were often seen passing his aviary to get a peep at him.

The ROTC had a retreat for Veteran's Day at the downtown Hattiesburg Memorial.

Reed Green was often filled during basketball season. The USM/Louisville game was no exception.

Departing, we leave behind us FOOTPRINTS ON THE SANDS OF TIME.

Walt Witman

If the football sidelines could talk, what stories they could tell!

Above: An addition to the USM campus this year was the petrified log which was placed beside Danforth Chapel. Left: The pride shined for USM throughout the football season.

Not only did our mascot beat the Mississippi State Bulldog, but our Golden Eagles defeated them in Jackson for the second consecutive year.

Chuck, this one was just for you!!

Below: Resident Hall visitation was a big issue for many students living on campus. Many students felt that there was not enough hours of visitation allowed.

Left: The Playboy Advisor was another very popular event sponsored by the UAC. It did, however, bring much controversy to the University. Below: Belonging to a club or organization meant many extra curricular hours.

Above: USM hosts a number of foreign students. With an excellent English Learning Institution, many students from throughout the world chose to study at USM. Right: The basketball season held many surprises for Coach M.K. Turk.

Left: People of all sorts attended USM. Below: Many students found it difficult to study in the dorms, so they found empty classrooms so that they could be alone.

Fraternities and Sororities participated in a number of events for charity. The Delta Gamma Anchorsplash was one example.

Above: Many USM fans got caught up in all of the excitement and went overboard with their spirit. Right: As the weather grew warmer many students began to enjoy a number of summer activities.

Eleanor R. Atwood-Tabell graduated from the Gulf Coast campus with a bachelor of science degree in Paralegal Studies.

Above: Many activities sponsored on campus held a very poor attendance.

Editor's Notes

This year has been a very interesting one for me. I have learned a great deal about myself and those that are close to me. Being Editor of the 1988 Southerner has been a challenge, one that I am very glad I chose to take. I feel that I have created an annual that portrays university life to the fullest, and one that the students and faculty can be proud of.

There are so many people that I would like to thank for giving me this opportunity. First of all I would like to thank my mom and dad for all of their encouragement and support. I would also like to thank my brother Stephen for his understanding while I was working and could not spend a lot of time with him.

Mr. Joey Sedtal is next on my list. He was my advisor in high school that taught me everything I know about producing a fantastic yearbook. Mr. Warren Dunn, my advisor here at USM, who was always there with a smile and a helping hand for anything that I needed. Miss Eva Metz, Union Secretary, for keeping up with the endless number of phone calls that came my way each day. I would also like to thank the office staffs of everyone in the Union.

My roommate Stephanie deserves a geat deal of credit for my success with this production. She was always there to lend an ear or a hand whichever I needed when a deadline approached. Thanks a bunch Steph!!! The rest of the ladies that lived in my suite in Mississippi Hall also deserve thanks, especially Chantelle Coleman who helped me finish up my typing the night before many deadlines.

I would also like to thank all of my sorority sisters, The Ladies of PI BETA PHI, for all of their support and understanding. A yearbook takes an endless number of hours, and I found it difficult to attend many functions, but my sorority sisters stood by me 100%.

I would like to thank my assistant editors, Kim Dowe, Suzanne Bienvenue, and Trey Joseph for their help and support. Paula Wilson and Phillip Traill did more than their share on the photographic end. Photo Service and all of its staff were absolutely wonderful and a pleasure to work with, Thank You so much for everything!

Last but not least I would like to thank the Administration and the Student Body for their support and assistance.

USM is a great school, and I doubt anyone at the University would say any different. Many memories are shared here and many lasting friendships gained. The "Coming of Age" is a memory of the 1988 school year, and my contribution to this year.
